

GCSE English (GCSE Questions and Answers Series)

It can seem very intimidating for a parent who, despite having their child's best interests at heart, is simply overwhelmed when it comes to technology. Well, let me help you with that. Students today need to be able to do a number of things which can all be achieved through using a simple, off the shelf mobile phone. If you buy them a smartphone, it really will smarten up your child.

Firstly, imagine your child is sat in a Mathematics class and needs to use a calculator. Do you know how many students these days carry around those bulky calculators? None! No, students use the calculators built into their phones. Now imagine it's homework time. The homework is written on the board for your lovely son or daughter to copy up but whoops! Where's that homework planner? Is it the same one that got soaked in the bottom of his bag last week? Well it doesn't matter: they can use their phone to take a photo of it.

But it doesn't stop there. Studies show that students who have regular ICT access learn at a faster rate. Well we'd love to give every student their own laptop but it just isn't feasible in the current budget. However, a smartphone can perform all of the online functions that you would find on a laptop. Let me explain.

Although it gets a bad press, the internet is a wonderful place these days. Sites such as mrbruff.com are packed with revision videos, eBooks and podcasts which help thousands of students to achieve their exam potential. Don't you want the same for your child? All they need is a phone and they can forget the laptop - they can even access the school wi-fi to surf for free, meaning they're not racking up a high bill. With our own safety filters in place, there is no chance of them finding something inappropriate online either.

Think back to your own education - wouldn't you have loved the chance to use the internet, take photos, set reminders and more? Well you can make that dream become a reality for your child.
